

KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES—The Camel Gets His'n.

WILL REOPEN TUESDAY
WITH MANY ENROLLED

Catholic University to Have Students Listed Representing Thirty States.

Faculty Comprises Eighty Professors. Registration to Continue Three Days of Next Week.

Arrangements are being completed for the opening of the twenty-sixth scholastic year of the Catholic University Tuesday. The enrollment is so large this year that many new students will not be able to obtain rooms in its residence halls, but will be obliged to find quarters outside of the university. It is expected that the freshman class will register about 150, from thirty states of the Union, about equally divided between the Schools of Science, Law and Letters. Divinity Hall will have about fifty young priests coming from thirty dioceses, among them representatives of four religious orders which do not yet possess their own house of studies at the university. The graduate students will be about seventy in number, including the fifty Knights of Columbus scholars.

Eighty Teachers Listed.

The professorial staff will this year number some eighty teachers. Several members have been added to it. Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan comes from St. Paul Seminary. He will enter the School of Philosophy as a professor in the department of social sciences, and particularly of industrial ethics. Rev. Dr. O'Grady of the diocese of Omaha has been appointed instructor in the School of Social Sciences, and Rev. Leo J. McVay, instructor in the department of education. In the School of Letters Dr. Charles Tansill of Brookland has been appointed instructor in the department of American history. J. T. Drury has been appointed instructor in the School of Letters, and Dr. Martinez de Alva instructor in the department of Spanish.

Additional Communities.

Two new religious communities have begun their houses of studies at the university. The Fathers and Brothers of Mary, from Dayton, Ohio, have opened their house of studies with one priest and several students. It is situated in the immediate vicinity of the university. This community has a large number of parochial schools and several colleges in different parts of the United States. The American Oblate Fathers are building a commodious house of studies near the entrance to the university at about $150,000. The new administration hall of the Sisters' College is rapidly approaching completion, and will soon be ready for occupancy. It will contain a large chapel, dining room, class rooms and laboratories. It is expected that the Sisters' College will have this year some sixty students, representing over thirty teaching communities in all parts of the United States.

Trinity College Term Opens.

Trinity College has already opened its doors and the number of students has considerably increased. Two hundred and twenty-five students have already registered, an increase of forty over last year. The accommodations of this graduate school for young women are already heavily overtaxed, and some enlargement of the college is already imperative.

Leaves Estate to Wife.

By the terms of the will of Joseph M. Brown, dated December 14, 1914, his entire estate is devised to his wife, Mary V. Brown. She is also named as executrix.

Advertising

"When I was selling hooks and eyes, I never failed to advertise. My stock was small, my joint obscure, but my announcements proved a lure, and people came from distant shores and passed by all the other stores; they gladly came to patronize the man who boomed his hooks and eyes. My ads were small, but full of zip; they gripped you and they held their grip; there was no weary waste of words, no language thrown at passing birds. I wrote them daily in my store; they were my most important chore. Each day I gave folks something new, to keep my little joint in view and aunts and sisters, and mas and dads, were always looking for my ads. All kinds of people, counts and cooks, came there to buy my eyes and hooks, to see the man whose daily spiel sent savor to the evening meal. And now you see my fine retreat, my modern home in Easy Street." This spoke to me, with balmy smile, a man who quickly made his pile; a few short years have seen him rise from that small joint of hooks and eyes to clipping coupons at his ease, a heap of bonds upon his knees.

WALT MASON.

TO LAY THE FOUNDATION
FOR FUTURE BUSINESS

Mutual Understanding Between U. S. and Latin America Chief Requisite, Bureau States.

Mutual understanding and acquaintance between the United States and Latin America are necessary before the United States can take, even in part, the place that Europe occupied before the outbreak of the war, declares the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in a statement just issued.

The statement says, in part: "The process of getting acquainted is coming on as rapidly as might be expected. With the establishment of banking institutions such as the branches of the National City Bank in Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, a great advance may be expected in the promotion of more intimate relations between the United States and Latin America."

One Pertinent Question.

"The pertinent question that every manufacturer and exporter must ask himself is whether or not conditions in Latin America warrant his taking up the active development of that market. More important, however, is the attitude taken toward the trade development in those countries. The American manufacturer should use, in developing this market, the common-sense business methods that he has so successfully used in the domestic markets of the United States."

"It is absolutely necessary, in the opinion of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, to give very careful study to this new market before thinking of making profits out of it. The bureau emphasizes the fact that now is the time for the American manufacturer to lay the foundations of future business in Latin America; now is the time to make the commercial and financial situation in Latin America clear to the possible future; now is the time to make his connections and form trade relations which he can follow up and develop in future years."

YACHT INDIAN IN PORT.

Makes Trip From New York by Inland Waterways.

Lying at the 9th street wharf southwest is the handsome power yacht Indian of New York, which arrived here from New York port Thursday afternoon. The vessel made the trip from New York to this city by the inland waterways along the coast, and Mr. and Mrs. Parsons and K. Van Ryper of New York are cruising aboard the Indian. The length of the stay of the Indian here is uncertain, and it was yesterday stated that she might sail today or might lay over until next week. The Indian is an exceptionally roomy and handsome craft and is fitted out in the most elegant style with all the comforts and conveniences possible. She is owned by Joseph Van Vleet, Jr. of New York and was built in 1913. She registers ninety-two gross and sixty-two net tons and is 92.5 feet long, 16.3 feet beam and 7.7 feet deep in the hold. Her 120-horsepower gasoline engine drives her at good speed. Though not approaching an ocean-going steamship in size, the Indian has many features in common with the big liners, and she is the West Indies and along the Atlantic coast to the Canadian provinces.

SEEK DEATH IN CELLS.

William McCormick and John McCormick Taken to Asylum Hospital.

William McCormick, fifty-two years old, a resident of Alexandria county, Va., and John McCormick, twenty-two years old, 1029 25th street, were taken to Washington Asylum Hospital last night because, the police reported, they attempted suicide while locked up at the seventh precinct police station.

The younger of the men was arrested near Wisconsin avenue and M street yesterday afternoon, and shortly after dark he was found suspended from his cell door, having improvised a noose with his coat.

A necktie was used by the older McCormick. He was arrested on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. He has been in the station on several other occasions, the police say, and they were surprised when they found him hanging from his cell door. It is probable that the prisoners, who are not relatives, will be tried in Police Court tomorrow.

May Irwin's Laugh-Maker.

If the tension has been too taut in Washington over wars and such things, as recently claimed by the inimitable comedienne, May Irwin and her new farce, "33 Washington Square," which she presented at a performance at the New National Theater last night as a compliment to the National Press Club, has relieved it, at least so far as it affects the higher lights of the official world and the heralders of its doings among the newspaper men of Washington. No audience that ever crowded the New National Theater has ever laughed more heartily nor more persistently than that of last night. And it was all over a play that represents the type of farce that Washington thoroughly approves and enjoys.

As the "apostle of laughter" Miss Irwin has played well and generously her part in these times when the chief element among the comedians of the pen and pencil seems to have been to conjure up horrors. At her own expense she has brought to the stage a play that is a presentation of her play from New York, Washington, especially to teach the members of the National Press Club and other well-to-do men and women to laugh than by sighing, and she did it to the queen's taste. Not only did she convert the newspaper men, but she converted the audience, under her banner. "33 Washington Square" embodies in its story the thrilling experiences of Mrs. De Peyster, a woman who, in fact, she is simply forced to hide herself at home because of straitened circumstances in order to protect her position as the social leader of New York. She resolves to occupy her own suite in her home and "keep dark" for three months, concealing the fact from every one but her faithful Matilda.

First William, a young man, who is Matilda's one best thing on earth, makes love to her unawares and her retort seems to send William into a frenzy. Matilda, then her son slips off and quietly marries a young woman against her wishes and concludes to lodge at mother's home as better and cheaper during her absence. Then a Mrs. Harvey, friend and counsel of Mrs. De Peyster, comes to the rescue, too, will drop in at unusual times to look around. This forces Mrs. De Peyster and Matilda to make a dash for a boarding house "with social pretensions," where the two are mistaken for crooks by a man who does not know them. The man who does not know them has a great scheme to get rich by having Mrs. De Peyster impersonate herself and her husband in a play. The man who does not know them is a sharp-tongued boarding house keeper, who converts her home into a playhouse, and treats them accordingly at all hours of the day or night until she is forced to leave. The man who does not know them is a sharp-tongued boarding house keeper, who converts her home into a playhouse, and treats them accordingly at all hours of the day or night until she is forced to leave.

G. W. U. LAW SCHOOL TO OPEN NEXT WEDNESDAY

Enrollment of Students Is Expected to Exceed That of Last Year.

Preparations are being completed for the opening of the George Washington University Law School Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. The lecture halls of the school are in the new Masonic Temple, 13th street and New York avenue northwest.

Prof. Everett Fraser, dean of the law school, is in the city and is in general charge of the registration, which has been in progress for more than a week. He is being assisted by Prof. William C. Van Hook, secretary of the law school. Last year 402 students were enrolled and there is every indication that the number will be greatly exceeded this year. Complete courses, three years in length, are being offered both in the forenoon and in the afternoon. The forenoon classes are from 9 to 12 o'clock and the afternoon classes are from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock. Courses are offered leading to the degree of bachelor of laws, master of laws and master of patent law. The school gives more instruction in patent law than any other law school in the United States. Two classes are offered, each two hours a week throughout the year. The school is in charge of a professor who is engaged in the practice of patent law. SAYS TRAINED WORKERS
ARE THE ONES DEMANDED

Homer S. Pace Tells of the Advantages of Vocational Education.

"We are controlled in our vocations, much more than any of us suspect, by our economic needs and desires," said Homer S. Pace last night, in a lecture on "Business Conditions," at the opening of the Washington School of Accountancy. In the audience were many teachers who act as vocational counselors in the high schools, who had been invited to meet with the students of the school.

"No volcano is so dangerous as to depopulate permanently the fertile areas at its base, and no tidal wave or earthquake will cause a people permanently to abandon a desirable commercial seaport," Mr. Pace declared in his lecture. "The demand for specialization also interferes with an individual's opportunity to select a vocation. There is no longer a chance in commerce for a man or woman with only general abilities. The general clerk is the hardest of men to place in a satisfactory position. If you can run a typewriter well, if you can sell goods well, if you can do a piece of work of the specific things into which specialization has led you, you will find more ready opportunities to market your special ability."

HOPES OF JEWS CENTER
IN PRESIDENT WILSON

Believe He Will Aid in Establishing Their Rights, Following War in Europe.

That President Wilson is the one great hope of the Jews of the world in obtaining their rights, following the European war, was the belief expressed by Rev. Dr. Abram Simon in his sermon at the Eighth Street Temple last evening. He said he believed that the Jews of this country are coming to recognize that in the President lies the greatest promise for relief of the Jews in Europe.

"President Wilson is the dominating thinker in the world situation," said Dr. Simon. "He has handled the most international complications in a masterful way. I believe that he has not only saved the Jewish people from a complete break, but he has given them confidence in him, and I firmly believe that when the day of reckoning for peace comes, the Jewish people will be one of the men of the world who will have an important share in the making of the arrangements."

REPAIRS TO WATER CRAFT.

Service on River and Bay.

Repairs to the hull of the schooner Charles L. Rohde of the Wimsatt fleet of this city have been completed, and she has been put overboard from the Marine Yard at Alexandria and Alexandria yard. The vessel had a leak that caused considerable trouble, and when she was taken out early in the week it was found to come from a hole made by a big borer worm. This, with a number of smaller holes, was stopped by the vessel given a coat of copper paint that will keep the worms away. She will go to North Carolina to load lumber for this city.
